AN ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION commemorating Gen. Robert E. Lee's surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia to Gen. U.S. Grant will be held at the Appomattox Court House National Historical Park this Saturday. Included in the day's activities will be a memorial service, a historical talk, a documentary film, and interpretative slide presentations.

Appomattox Court House National Historical Park is located 3 miles north of Appomattox, Virigina on State Route 24. The park contains over 29 historic structures and is open daily from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. and has a $1.00 per vehicle entry fee.

Concord to get doctor's office

Three local physicians, Dr. John A. Mathews, Dr. Albert A. Fratrick, and Dr. Kenneth A. Powell, all physicians of Appomattox have agreed to open a medical facility at Concord in the freshly renovated Sunday School room of Bethlehem United Methodist Church located in the heart of the village.

The Concord Ruritan Club has been interested in locating a doctor there ever since Dr. Richard Cross, a beloved physician who practiced more than 40 years, stepped down 15 years ago.

Approximately one year ago, an application for certificate of need was submitted to the Health Systems Agency in Lynchburg. Approval would have possibly entitled the Concord area to Federal Funds to establish a clinic similar to ones that have failed in the past. It was at this time that the Appomattox doctors stepped in and agreed to offer services in the Concord area three night a week to document the community needs. Since then, a cooperative effort with the people of Concord will bring to fruition a medical facility capable of expanding as the need arises. The doctors point out that their practive in Appomattox will be exactly the same, no change in hours with 24 hour coverage as usual. If the satelite office is a success, then recruitment for another physician would be in order.

Office hours at the satelite clinic will be 6 to 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings beginning April 12th. No Appointment is necessary. The Concord telephone number is 993-3411. Toll-freeservice to Appomattox office is anticipated int he near future.

Henderson to speak

William D. Henderson

April 9

The Appomattox Chapter of the United Daughters of Confederacy will hold a Memorial Service at the Confederate Cemetery in the Appomattox National Historical Park on Saturday, April 9 at 1:30 p.m.

Speaker for the occasion will be William D. Henderson. A native of Jefferson County, New York, he now resides in Petersburg, Virginia and is a member of the history department of Richard Bland College in Petersburg.

Specializing in Civil War history and the history of the city of Petersburg, Henderson has taught courses for ten years on The Coming of the Civil War and on the Civil War. His Civil War course, specializing in military history, includes guided tours to the battlefields and Civil War museums in Virginia. As a result, Henderson, in conjunction with the Petersburg National Military Park, has sponsored an annual bus tour for the general public from Petersburg to Appomattox on the first Saturday in April of each year.

Three plan 100-mile benefit run

By FRANCES H. PAULETTE

Robert Earl Pankey, Appomattox County resident and well known runner knows about the suffering and heartbreak that cancer causes. He knows, and he cares....cares enough, in fact, to enter a 100 mile endurance run for the cause of cancer.

Robert Earl, who has been employed at Babcock and Wilcox for the past 25 years will run with two fellow workers from B&W, Dr. Bernie Davis and Dr. Jim Friem.

The three runners will leave Madison Heights at midnight on April 10 for a 100 mile endurance run to Goochland.

"We will leave Madison Heights at 12 midnight on April 10 and head off down Wright Shop Road, run by Gladstone, across Highway 60, through Wingina, into Scottsville and on into Goochland," said Robert who has been running for the past fifteen years.

"We hope to finish in less than 24 hours," he said. "Any contributions given because of our running will go to fight the dreaded disease, cancer. We are fully aware of how much money is needed for research and treatment."

For the first seven or so years of his running career, Robert Earl didn't take the business of running too seriously. He'd run three or four times a week. Then about six or seven years ago, he really got down to business. He now runs on the average of 70 miles each week.

"It is more or less an addiction," Robert Earl said. "If you goof off and don't run for one day, you begin to feel guilty. I guess it kind of gets in your blood."

On the forthcoming endurance run, the runners plan to run eight minutes and then walk four minutes, keeping up this pattern for as long as possible.

"Of course," he said, "as we get near to the end of the race we will probably be running five minutes and walking five minutes."

"You need drinks will be transported along the way so that at any time the runners need refreshment it will be available.

In 1981 Robert Earl ran in the Toys For Tots Race in Lynchburg; it was a 100 mile run; he completed 80 of those miles. Three weeks ago he completed a 26 mile run at Virginia Beach.

"I enjoy running," Robert Earl said. "I ran in excess of 3200 miles last year. I did one 50 miler last year."

"I have had family and friends to have died of cancer. I know what a terrible things it is, both for the victim of the disease and for those family members and friends who have to watch the patient suffer," Robert Earl said.

"I hope our running will prompt individuals to give as much as possible to fight cancer."

Robert Earl, who, in addition to his work at B&W is a professional photographer, still finds the time to run and to run for a cause.....the cause of cancer.

Anyone wishing to pledge money, whether it be a given amount per mile or a lump sum, may make pledges at the following locations: Appomattox Rexall Drug Store, Appomattox Hardware, Appomattox Family Practice, The Clothesline and The Times-Virginian newspaper.

With Easter '83 in the record book, next comes May Day, Mother's Day and Memorial Day, and along the way FT Day (Pay Taxes). Easter week end was symbolic. A heavy thunderstorm, with all the trimmings. I wanted to place a "No Fishing" sign in what may eventually be my garden, if'n it ever dries out enough to keep seed from floating away. But Easter Sunday was near perfect. I arose at six and by ten o'clock had been to church services twice. There was an ecumenical service at seven and my church had regular service at nine. A word about the local ecumenical service. The Youth Chorus presented an inspiring performance and young David Williams contributed a great solo number, "He Is Risen", accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Lois Williams. David is a high school sophomore and surely has great talent. Sermon was by Rev. Harmon Smith, with Rev. Edward Leonard as liturgist.

* * *

No school as the Easter Break is observed. What do students do when not in school? I saw several early Monday out jogging.

* * *

Brought in a lovely hibiscus to keep company with the daffodils for indoor display. Some people prune and trim forsythia, others just let it grow. No problem for me for I do not have any. But lots of it all around the town and county.

* * *

Basketball has so dominated the sports pages, the opening of the pro baseball season sort of caught us unprepared. Who's on first?

Do not overlook fishing. Shad and herring are running in tidewater and trout are luring the fishing fraternity to the piedmont and mountain streams. And West Virginia ramps are in season. The Hacker Valley Ramp Dinner is set for April 16. What a menu: Ramps, fried and raw, bacon, Northern beans, fried potatoes, fried eggs, pickled eggs, apple sauce, relish plate, corn bread, hot rolls, cake, jelly, butter, coffee, tea, and kool-aid. $5.

Mrs. Gatha Mitchell and daughter, Sandra Givens and her daughters, Michelle and Jenny, of Webster Springs, W. Va. recently visited Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Martin, of Lucy Street. While here they toured the local National Park Service area. Mrs. Mitchell is Mrs. Martin's sister.

In last week's column I asked: "What is a Petroglyph?" A carving in stone. Often of special historical importance.

Worth attending: Carol Chaning will appear in "Hello Dolly" in Richmond in May. An all-time favorite.

Sorry to hear of the death of Augustus ("Gus") Robbins, retired after a great career as owner, publisher, editor of The Hopewell News. I knew him as an outstanding newspaper man. He was 83.

Many disasters all around the world. Earthquakes, fighting; a boiling trouble kettle. Let us keep Virignia and our slice of it, steady and peaceful. Thanks for reading and seeya around.

Students have lots in common

By BILL SHERROD

Linda and Lydia are good friends. They are both from Buckingham County. They have gone through Longwood College together, and will both receive degrees in business administration at Longwood's commencement on May 14.

And, they are mother and daughter.

"We may be the first mother and daughter to graduate together at Longwood College," comments Linda Davenport, who with her daughter, Lydia Kalata is finishing her last semester at Longwood.

The two women began college in August of 1980, before Lydia had married her husband, Steve Kalata, who is also a student at Longwood College. He is majoring in Biology.

When they began college, they both lived at the Davenport home near Mt. Rush. Lydia and her husband now live in Farmville. "Lydia had to push a little harder than I at first, because I had some credits which transferred from earlier courses I had taken," says Linda. Both women will receive degrees after only three years at Longwood.

Having a mother and daughter named Linda and Lydia in the same class at the same college majoring in the same discipline would, one might expect, lead to some confusion. "Believe it or not, we never got each other's grades," comments Linda.

"But sometimes people would call me Linda, I think just because they had a hard time pronouncing 'Lydia'" Lydia adds.

Attending college with your mother has its advantages, Lydia says. It also has its disadvantages. "I never could get away with anything," laughs the daughter. But, according to Linda, their classmates were harder on the mother.

"If I wasn't in a class, or anything else unusual, Lydia's friends would tell her. I thought that was a real switch, the girls tattling on the mother," Linda chuckles.

Lydia, whose degree will include a concentration in management/marketing, is currently a marketing assistant with Virginia National Bank in Farmville. Her work there is part of a work-experience program coordinated through the college, for which she receive academic credit.

Linda, who works part time in the college president's office in addition to taking classes, went back to college "in the jobs I had, I would reach a certain level, and could advance no further because I didn't have a college degree." Her business administration degree will include a concentration on accounting.

"The hardest part for me was getting back into the groove of studying, after being away from it for so long," Linda says. She had taken several courses at Arlington State College in Texas in the early 1960s.

"One thing I didn't have to get used to was being around students," she adds. "I worked at Buckingham County High School for three years before starting at Longwood."

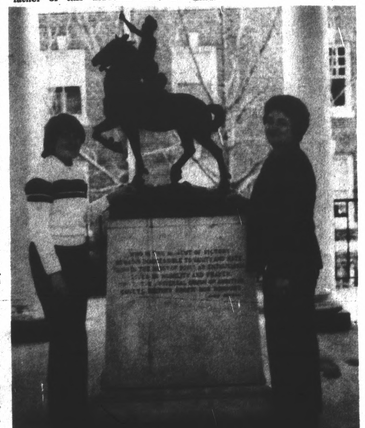
Howard Davenport, the husband/father of this academic duo, is employed by the Buckingham County School Board.

"I've really enjoyed college, and I College," the mother adds. "It's been a good experience overall.

How does Linda's husband and Lydia's father feel about his two girls attending college simultaneously? "It's been an experience, and it hasn't been an inexpensive experience," Linda notes. "But he's tickled to death.

And Lydia left her maiden name, Davenport, on her degree, so that she and her mother would be next to each other in line when the sheepskins are handed out on May 14.

"That one's for her daddy," smiles Linda.



LYDIA (left) and Linda, who will both graduate from Longwood College in May, are a mother and daughter academic duo originally from Buckingham County. They will both receive degrees in business administration at Longwood's commencement on May 14.
